

TWO HANGED.

Craig and McCarthy, Cincinnati Murderers, Swing Off.

Their Last Hours on Earth Passed in Feasting.

McCarthy is the first one to be hanged, followed closely by Craig. Made this Trip in Thirteen Minutes and was Hanged in Twelve.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 4.—Edward McCarthy and Charles Craig, the former white and the latter colored, Cincinnati murderers, were hanged in the penitentiary annex early Friday morning. When the spectators entered the execution room Warden James, Assistant Deputy Stuckhouse and Guard Grump were standing as motionless as ghostly places of statuary. They were joined by Deputy Playford, while the small crowd arranged itself in readiness for the horrible spectacle. It was just 12:00 o'clock when a muffled "Good-by" was uttered in the adjoining room as the leave-taking of Craig and McCarthy took place.

A moment later Edward McCarthy stepped upon the scaffold of death. His face was an ashen hue, his lips colorless and firmly set, and his eyes sent forth an expression of wild desperation. McCarthy may be described as "nothing in his life so became him as the leaving of it." He walked with a firm step, and stood erect while the fatal order preceded by the executioner's death took place. He made all the officials good-bay, shaking hands with each. Deputy Playford, Assistant Deputy Stuckhouse and Guard Grump then adjusted the straps around the doomed man's legs. Then Father O'Leary, who had followed McCarthy onto the scaffold, pressed the crucifix to his lips. The murderer kissed it reverently. Warden James, who stood with his hand on his hip, said to him at this point said: "Mr. McCarthy, if you have any statement to make, now is your opportunity."

McCarthy replied: "Gentlemen, I bid you good-bay, all and all." In his excitement he made a mistake, for what he evidently intended to say was "one and all," but he said: "I bid you good-bay, all and all." He then uttered the last word the black cap was adjusted and the place around the neck by Deputy Playford. The noose was carefully placed around the signal from the deputy the warden pulled the lever. McCarthy shot through the trap at precisely this time.

A gasp and a gasping sound were audible as he went down. His body swung once around after the seven-foot drop. Then a ghastly smile came to Edward McCarthy's dead face. The black cap had caught in the noose in going down and jerked the neck around to face the spectators. He slowly struggled to death, while his legs jerked convulsively up and down, and his finger tips pressed into the palms of his hands. A gasping sound came from his throat as he slowly died. A choking sound from his throat was plainly audible, while his breast heaved spasmodically in efforts for breath. One moment after the trap was closed McCarthy's respiration was seventy-seven. It ran up to 114 and then dropped back to 104. A moment later again it reached 114 and then slowly declined until it was pronounced dead at exactly 12:23.

His body was quickly cut down, and when the black cap was removed a dark-blue mark encircled the throat. The neck was not broken. McCarthy was just twelve and one-half minutes in dying, which is a remarkably short period for a person strangled. His death was painful, but it came quickly. Just seven minutes after he was pronounced dead the trap was sprung under Craig. The removing of the rope from McCarthy's neck, the striking away of the remains of the scaffold, the scolding of the rope to make it slip easy for the next victim, was all done with surprising speed and dispatch.

The same assistants as before at once prepared for their ugly work a second time. Craig kissed the crucifix and shook hands with all on the scaffold, saying "Good-bay" to each. He then kissed the crucifix again and the work of pinning his arms and legs was quickly performed. He stood without a quiver. "Now, Craig, if you have any thing to say to your fellow men, now is your chance," said the warden. The voice, responded: "No. Nothing. I forgive every body and I want every body to forgive me."

That was all. He stopped talking, and his last words were spoken.

In a twinkling the black cap was drawn, the noose was slipped over his head, and the trap sprang, and Craig was in eternity. The work was completely successful.

There was no twitching, or jerking, or gasping sounds, and no convulsive death. His neck was broken, and he evidently suffered no pain. No muscle quivered while the body hung in the air. He went through the trap at exactly 12:33.

Craig died in twelve and a half minutes and McCarthy in thirteen. His body showed no marks except the mark of the rope. His features were calm, and the smile that he wore when he was hanged was still on his face. The warden offered to furnish the men stimulants during the last moments, but both men refused. They both exercised the same stoic courage.

POISON IN FOOD.

In Old Times a Sharp Watch Was Kept on the Cook's Dishes.

The fear of poison which haunted the mind of every person of quality during the Middle Ages gave rise to certain curious customs, and even to certain superstitions. When fishes are now served for the purpose of keeping them warm. This was not, however, the principal reason why they were served covered during the Dark Ages. It was the fear that poison might be introduced into them surreptitiously between the kitchen and the table where they were to be served to the kings or lords, or even to persons of inferior rank.

The covers were not removed until the moment when the guests were seated. All dishes afterward served were brought on the table in the same manner.

It was the custom of the ancients that the servants to first partake of them, but this custom was observed in part replaced by the servants touching the food with one of several objects which were regarded as infallible preservatives against poison.

The objects were the horn of the unicorn, a serpent's tongue, the fabulous stone found in the head of a toad, serpentine, agate and other stones. The first was considered the best, but as the unicorn never existed, its horn was replaced by that of the narwhal or by a shark's tooth.

Many persons kept a small piece of it at the bottom of their drinking glasses, and it was worth more than ten times its weight in gold.

It was once proved that the stone alleged to come from the head of the toad had that origin, and the druggists would not have it.

AT QUARANTINE.

The Cholera Situation There is No Doubt Very Grave.

An Appeal From the Cabin Passengers on the Normanna.

The Quarantine of S. Sept. 4.—The cholera situation at quarantine is, no doubt, very grave. Not only are new cases breaking out every day among the steerage passengers of the ill-fated Normanna and Rugia, the former of whom are on Hoffman Island, but it has now settled well among the crew of the big express steamer, who are on board, anything can be added to the horror of the situation, it is the fact that the cabin passengers, who have been free from signs of the disease, are still kept, like rats in a trap, inclosed with the side of the steamer, with cholera raging alongside them.

"No ship to put them on; no place where I can land them," says the health officer, while the agents, whose place it is to see the passengers cared for, say nothing. Dr. Jenkins has made strenuous exertions to obtain a place to put the well passengers, but up to the present has been unsuccessful.

PROF. VIRCHOW.

The Scientist Speaks of the Pestilence in Russia.

The Belief That Winter Will Stop the Cholera is Erroneous.

The Professor Adopts Personal Cleanliness and Attention to Digestion as the Best Individual Precautions—Carbolic Acid and Sublimated Disinfectants.

BERLIN, Sept. 9.—Prof. Virchow, who has returned from a visit to Russia, speaks in terms of the Russian officials who, in some respects, he says, are in advance of those of Germany. He expects from these expressions of approval the officials of the Volga region whom he evidently considers not as trustworthy as those whom he met in other parts of the empire. He says that Russian statistics are to be relied upon, although their value would always be relative. West Russia Prof. Virchow reports that the cholera is present in Moscow, yet the fact that 600 beds are empty in the hospital bears evidence that the disease is so common as to tax the resources of that city.

In regard to the probable duration of the cholera epidemic, Prof. Virchow says that the belief that the arrival of winter will stop the cholera is erroneous, as there have been epidemics of the disease in winter. In regard to the symptoms and nature of cholera, Prof. Virchow gives his opinion that when there are symptoms of Asiatic cholera the fact that the committal illness, peculiar to the disease, is not found, proves that it is not Asiatic cholera.

As to the remedying, Prof. Virchow says that spraying with diluted carbolic acid, is useless, in his opinion. He advocates personal cleanliness and attention to digestion, as the best means of precautions. As a general preventative, Prof. Virchow considers that a perfect quarantine would be effective, and that travelers should be required to examine. He considers saloon passengers equally dangerous with steerage passengers, if they have been on the infected ships. Although Prof. Virchow is in favor of spraying with diluted carbolic acid is not of value, he regards carbolic acid and sublimated as the best disinfectants, and he advises the washing of the hands after touching a cholera patient. While the excreta or vomit from such patients, in the opinion of Prof. Virchow, the means of communicating the infection, yet that communication can be made in numerous, different and hardly detectable forms through the air, the post, linen that is soiled, the boots or shoes, the hands and the mouth. The general tone of the professor's statements was encouraging, and he did not doubt that in his opinion the worst was passed in regard to Russia.

Engineer Roasted Alive.
SPRINGFIELD, O., Sept. 9.—Freight train No. 61, west-bound on the Big Four, was derailed Thursday morning at Enon, eight miles west of here, from some unknown cause. Twenty-five cars were derailed, and half of the number burned up, most of them being loaded. Engineer James Ferguson, of Delaware, was caught under the locomotive, and burned alive before the eyes of others of the crew. The loss will probably run up to $50,000. Ferguson leaves wife and two little children behind, and was caught at the waist by beams, between two drivers, and held there until burned up in sight of his companions, whom he saved good-by after making his dying requests.

Sullivan's Nose Badly Broken.
NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 9.—Sullivan did not get up until 10 o'clock. His face was in worse shape Thursday morning than it was Wednesday night, and the pain is greater. Sullivan drank some cold coffee, ate some toast and butter, and then sent for Dr. Leeman. After the doctor arrived he made a careful examination and found John's nose badly broken. In fact, it was smashed flat on his face. Dr. Leeman sent Sullivan's nose and dressed his cuts, which Sullivan said he did not mind and read the account of the fight. Sullivan seems dazed at his defeat.

But One County Republican.
LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Sept. 9.—Election returns came in slowly, but indications are that Fishback will lead Whipple in the race by 5,000. Only one county—Faulkner—is reported positively for the Populists while it will take the official count to decide the vote in Nevada county. But one county in the state has gone Republican and that is Choctaw, in which the Negroes have an overwhelming majority.

Escaped Murderer Caught.
MANASSASVILLE, Ky., Sept. 9.—George Killough, who murdered Polly Adcock in this (Hopkins) county ten years ago, and who one year afterward broke jail at this place, has been apprehended in Arkansas. He arrived here Thursday and was placed in the jail. Killough broke jail a left a wife and one child in this city, and when apprehended he was married and had two children.

Woman Suffrage in Mississippi.
JACKSON, Miss., Sept. 9.—Female suffrage has at last won a victory in this state. The first election perhaps at which women ever voted in the south is that on the stock law question. Just a few percent of the population have perceived the privilege. The law provides that all persons who are householders and none other shall vote on the fence question. This means that women who own a home to the right of suffrage.

Firemen Break Jail.
CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Sept. 9.—An account of gross carelessness on the part of the sheriff and jail officials, fifteen criminals broke jail here. The escape was effected by sawing through the bars of the window. In the gang were four murderers under sentence. They had been working at the plan for two months. The sheriff with a posse is in pursuit.

"SULLIVAN DISCONSOLATE."

He Says to McLaughlin "Booze, My Lad, Will Down the Strongest Don't Touch"

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 9.—The fallen idol passed a restless night at the St. Charles, and before daylight broke and while all-sight, Sullivan was still about in numbers the defeated man walked into the almost deserted corridors of the hotel. He looked haggard, and his swollen face and feeble feeling of him in the hearts of those who watched him.

The reverses of fortune has cut Sullivan to the quick. He is heart-broken. "An American has whipped me," he asserted. "That is the only satisfaction that is left to me now." The efforts of his friends to cheer him up were unavailing. "To think that a boy has beaten me," was another lament. Now that the end has come he has cursed the enemy that swept him on to sure defeat. To Jack McAuliffe he delivered a temperance lesson. "Booze, my lad, will down the strongest don't touch it." The advice was intended to be personal and was received without comment.

The last scene in the ring is vividly recalled on every hand. Corbett was the first man to reach his prostrate antagonist to lend a helping hand. There was something in the way he did it, the well address of the ex-champion's. He spoke but few words, but there are several versions in circulation. "I've got you," he said, "and you're a drinker." "I entered the ring once too often," was his admission. "I leave it to-night for good." In his remarks, Sullivan's appointment welled from eyes that could not be dried.

Words of comfort failed in their mission. "I am beaten, beaten," was the despairing cry. Few souls were the old to invade his quarters. The old series of disputes began again. From month to month there is one which may be of spurious courage, but it is affirmed that the big fellow is at the bottom of the bottle. In drink "John L. Sullivan will now board a limited express with a through ticket to the devil," is a common remark.

MORE CHOLERA VICTIMS.

The Yellow Flag Again Ran Up to the West Coast.
QUARANTINE, N. Y., Sept. 9.—A dispatch received from San Diego, Calif., says that the Russia, Normanna and Hoffmann Island hospital, which was closed Thursday morning. According to the word of signals arranged by Dr. Jenkins Wednesday, the number of the scourge has increased on most victims. In the report comes from the vessels and island, it will be impossible to learn how many have been taken ill, or whether they are dead. A LONE BANDIT

Holds Up a Missouri Freight Express Wagon, Securing Several Thousand Dollars.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 9.—A lone bandit held up a Missouri freight express messenger on the Wichita and Little Rock express on the Missouri Pacific, and after ransacking the safe made good his escape. The train left the Union depot at 9:10 o'clock, and when it reached the Grand Avenue station a masked man entered the combination baggage and express car, which was in charge of G. M. Loughlin, combining baggage and express messenger. The bandit intimidated the messenger by pointing two revolvers and finally succeeded in binding and gagging him. He then extracted the key of the express company's safe in the messenger's pocket, and opening the safe, secured five thousand dollars. When the train reached Sheffield, a suburb some distance out of the city, the robber disembarked and made off with his booty. The train proceeded several stations down the road before the robbery was discovered.

The conductor found McLaughlin blind and gagged, who after being released, told the story of the robbery as given above and telegraphed headquarters in this city. Officers started on the train at Sheffield. The bandit was not seen. It transpires that though it took but one man to accomplish the active part of the work, he was aided by a "corps." The accomplice, who rode the rear door to the express car while the other man bound and gagged the express messenger. The safe was a very light one, but no key was locked with a key. Therefore the difficulty of opening it was reduced to a minimum.
